WHEN TOGO WAS YOUNG.

A retired English naval officer, who, when a lad was on board the training ship Worcester at the same time as the future Japanese Admiral Togo, tells the 1000 following reminiscences: Togo was constantly the victim of all manner of chaff from the young Britishers on board, who called him "One-gotwo-go-three-go." Disliked at first, per hans because he was unlike his mates, he grew in popularity on account of his remarkably alert mind and agile body. 325 until at longth he became a general favorite with officers and boys.

He stood all chaff with a certain amount emblance to the Chinese. To one fellow sailor who dubbed him on Chinamen, he said with emphasis: "When I am 'the' admiral I hang you at the yardarm."

One day Togo had his leave stopped for ome small offense. "Liberty boys to go ashore" was piped, and the boys went up to him and said, "Are you to go?" No," he replied. Immediately the youngsters got around him and pinched him for telling lies, shouting at the same

New Interest in the Legend of the Buried Treasure.

SEARCH IN NEW MEXICO

Story of Capture of Beatriz by the Comanches.

The discovery by a party of English and German miners in South America of the buried treasure of the Incas, which had been dismissed from men's minds long ago as a myth, has revived interest in legends of other vast stores of gold and silver hidden by aborigines from Spanish invaders and by the padres from Indian marauders in the strenuous times of Cortex and his successors. George McAllister and Juan Alvarado, mining engineers, well known in the Southwest and Mexico, who spent the winter in New York arranging a deal in copper properties located in Sonora, left for the west early in May, because they, have reasons satisfactory to themselves for believing that the story of the treasures of Gran Quivira is no fable.

The treasure of the Incas is estimated by the discoverers and by the government of Bolivia, which claims all or large part of it, to be worth about 118,his partner are seeking in New Mexico He stood all chaff with a certain amount is supposed to be a little less than half of bravado, unless it touched on his re- of that amount, but $7,000,000 is worth digging for, even in these days of the multi-

Gran Quivira was the dream and lure with the fabled Seven Cities of Cibola, and it loomed large in the tales told to the Spaniards by an Indian captive called "The Turk." This strange Indian told Coronado of a great city, whose people used gold and silver for the commonest purposes; whose nobles took their slesta under great trees bearing golder bells that made music as the wind moved the branches, and whose stores of treasure were beyond the dreams of avarice.

Unquestionably "The Turk" was a gorgeous liar, but Coronado was credule and in the wake of that aboriginal fraud he travelled many a weary league in search of the fabled city.

THE PRESENT HAMLET OF GRAN QUIVIRA.

The legend of the Gran Quivira survived many fruitless expeditions. It was the mirage that led Spanish adventurer across the descrts for more than a century, and at last the name that had been as unstable as a will-o'-th-wisp, settled down upon a pueblo in the Manzano Gran Quivira of today is a picturesque of a great canal which brought water down from the mountains when the

The old soldier told the padre of Valencin that when the people of Gran Quivira determined to abandon the town they gathered all the treasure belonging to the church and to individuals, amount dng to more than $7,000,000, and buried it not far from the western end of the church. In the middle of a dark night the whole population marched away toward the valley of the Rio Grande.
